

Introducing our new Southern Man...

ETITO is thrilled to announce the appointment of Electrotechnology and Telecommunications Training Manager, Mike Grinder into a brand new regional office located in Dunedin.

The addition of Mike's new role means that ETITO will now have the opportunity to grow the level of service in the South Island whilst easing the load of the Christchurch regional office which had previously administered the entire region with the help of three part-time training advisors.

"The South Island is a huge area geographically, and as apprentice numbers have increased so too has the need to increase and maintain the level of service available to industry in the region," says ETITO Electrotechnology and Telecommunications Manager, Paul Hollings.

"Now we have expanded training manager support in the South Island, we can be confident that apprentices and employers within the region have the support necessary to complete their chosen apprenticeship in a timely and cost-effective manner."

With a background in appliance servicing and sales and a real commitment to training, Mike jumped at the chance to work for ETITO and help train for the future. Having only recently moved from Auckland to Dunedin, he is looking forward to getting out and about to meet employers and apprentices in the south, while helping more and more people to get involved in the exciting worlds of electrotechnology and telecommunications.

From now on the West Coast, South Canterbury, Otago and Southland will be supported by Mike Grinder in Dunedin and ETITO's Christchurch based training manager, Marty Matheson, will look after Ashburton, Canterbury and Nelson-Marlborough. This split is based largely on the spread of trainees throughout the South Island.
