

EMPLOYER SUPPORT – THE SECRET TO TRAINEE SUCCESS

When it comes to achieving a national qualification there's no substitute for hard work and dedication. Add a supportive employer to the mix, and you've got a real recipe for success.

Those are the sentiments of Daniel Fazackerley, 24, who is the first to complete the National Certificate in Electronic Security [Installer] [Level 3] at Chubb Security in Lower Hutt and cites the support of his managers Robert Hemphill and Andrew Taylor, as being instrumental in his success.

“Chubb has been really supportive of me,” say Daniel, who admits that being organised and proactive with study has sometimes been a challenge. “If I've fallen behind with my Workplace Logbook, all I've had to do is ask and Robert and Andrew have been happy to allocate time for me to catch-up. I get paid to go on my block courses and they're really good about finding work which corresponds with my on-job requirements.”

ETITO Training Manager for the Central region, Paul Craven agrees that employer support can often be the secret to success – and that Daniel's been fortunate to have two passionate trainers behind him 100%. “There's no doubt that training is a partnership, and Daniel and his employer have a great relationship which has really translated into success for both parties. Daniel has a genuine enthusiasm for the trade and has become a real advocate for training to the national standard within Chubb, which is great.”

Daniel is keen to continue on the national qualifications pathway. “Electronic security is such a fast-paced industry so there's always new stuff to learn. There's so much opportunity for a young person doing this trade. I could go into consultancy or design access control systems, the possibilities are really varied and interesting, and the technology is constantly evolving.”
